In February of 2007, Sophie Elizabeth Quayle, at age three, was diagnosed with a diffuse intrinsic pontine glioma (DIPG) – a cancerous brain tumor. This type of tumor is located in the brainstem, at the base of the brain. Affecting primarily children, it is the rarest and worst of pediatric brain tumors. Approximately 150 to 200 children are diagnosed each year. This type of tumor is considered terminal, and survival time is typically nine to twelve months following diagnosis.

Sophie’s parents, Marc and Emily Quayle of Avon Lake, felt an overwhelming sense of helplessness when learning there was nothing the doctors could do to save Sophie’s precious life. Sophie passed away October 6, 2007, just seven and a half months after diagnosis.

This great despair and frustration led Marc and Emily on a mission to help children and families battling pediatric brain cancer and to organizations committed to fighting pediatric brain cancer.
